YourEncore Announces Regulatory Service Area For Life Sciences

INDIANAPOLIS – (December 5, 2007) – YourEncore (<http://www.yourencore.com>), an organization that helps companies accelerate innovation by connecting them with retired and veteran scientists and engineers to leverage their expertise, today announced the addition of YourEncore Regulatory, a suite of services that delivers regulatory lifecycle management for life sciences companies.

YourEncore Regulatory provides the knowledge and innovation needed to assist internal collaboration and planning, define regulatory approaches for successful submissions and negotiations with regulatory authorities, and maintain regulatory compliance. Services include regulatory strategy for drug development, drug safety and risk management; due diligence; investigational filings; submissions planning and management; labeling, advertising and promotional review; and marketed product compliance. YourEncore regulatory experts each have 15 or more years experience in the life sciences industry.

Carol Crowley is practice manager of YourEncore Regulatory. Crowley is a 25-year veteran of the drug and device industry. Prior to joining YourEncore, Crowley was vice president of Global Regulatory Operations at Aventis. There she was responsible for drug development and post marketing support, overseeing regulatory policy and intelligence, global submissions, regulatory databases, global systems and standards, and translations. She has led two large global cross-functional reengineering process improvement teams to harmonize early- and late-stage drug development and regulatory planning, and has implemented global electronic document management and publishing for agency submissions.

“Heightened regulatory scrutiny in the United States and globally is challenging life sciences, device and biopharmaceutical regulatory compliance with increasingly complex regulations and procedures,” said Crowley. “YourEncore has the experience and flexibility to work with companies in developing and providing effective solutions to meet regulatory and compliance needs and to ensure successful outcomes.”
